Wheeled Coach has delivered 76 ambulances to the Fire Department of New York (FDNY). This order is part of a larger fleet of 76 ambulances that will be equipped with a new power unit that allows the vehicles to fully operate without the need to run in idle mode. The engine technology provides maintenance and fuel cost savings, as well as a quality-of-air benefit for residents. EMS patients also benefit from the reduction in engine exhaust during a service call.

In addition to the green technology, these vehicles come equipped with 4-wheel drive capability to ensure first responders answer the call in the worst of weather conditions. "Our employees take great pride in building the most advanced and rugged vehicles to meet the demands of the city that never sleeps," stated Tim Sullivan, CEO of REV Group. "Our designers and engineers work closely in partnership with FDNY to build their trucks. It's a collaboration that has developed over the last decade," said Kevin Kraus head of engineering at Wheeled Coach.
