"This is an important investment for our team and our community," said Randy Hanson, Vice President and General Manager, AEV. "Our decision to move to one unified complex versus several buildings spread out over five miles, reinforces our strong culture, enhances our production capabilities, improves operating efficiencies, and allows for future growth."

AEV's consolidation is being executed in a phased approach to avoid any disruption to production. Facility refurbishments are expected to be concluded by the end of this summer and all equipment installation should be completed by February 2022. The new facility layout will provide several key advantages:

- Expansion from 4 production lines to 5 increases production capacity to allow for additional growth.
- Single-piece flow through all stages of the state-of-the-art paint process for new and remounted ambulances provides greater consistency.
- Utilization of designated quality gates will further enhance overall vehicle quality.

"AEV has an unwavering commitment to caring for our staff, customers and dealers," continued Hanson. "Our new, unified manufacturing facility will allow us to deliver our American-crafted excellence and customer experience in the best possible environment."
